

ROULETTE

HOW TO PLAY

Roulette is an easy and exciting game to play with a wide variety of bets and betting combinations. There are 36 numbers, alternately colored red and black and a 0 and 00 which are green. The winning wager is decided by the random selection of one number out of the possible 38. This selection happens by spinning a ball in the opposite direction of a turning wheel.

Each spin of the ball is a new game. Players buy in for various colored chips to differentiate between players. Players decide the value of their chips when they buy-in. When players are finished playing, they return their colored chips to the dealer for regular casino chips. The colored or "non-value" chips have no value once they are removed from their particular table.

Each payoff is dictated by the location of a wager on the roulette table. Bets can be placed until the dealer announces "No more bets." Once the ball drops into a winning number the dealer will mark that number on the layout. All losing bets will be collected, then the winning bets will be paid according to the odds. Players are responsible for the correct position of their bet on the layout.

There are two basic areas to wager on the roulette table – inside bets and outside bets.

INSIDE BETS

Bets can be placed on either a particular number or an inside combination of numbers. The total of a player's inside bets must meet the posted table minimum and individually cannot exceed table maximums.

OUTSIDE BETS

Bets can be placed for red or black, odd or even, the first or second 18 numbers, the first, second or third dozen numbers and for each column of numbers. Each bet must meet the posted table minimum and is not to exceed table maximums.
